

The School of Education and CECH present

POWER FRIDAY

September 22, 2017

407 Teachers-Dyer Complex

2-3 pm, Professional Development on Research Funding Opportunities

Carole Donnellon, Steve Hegge, and others

A one-hour professional development session to increase attendees' awareness of supports for identifying funding opportunities that match their research interests. During this session there will be a demonstration of a database search tool now available at UC as well as supports and resources provided by CECH, SRS, and UC Foundation.

3-4 pm, Research Presentation

Education for Sustainability in the Anthropocene: Now or Never?

Dr. Sue Elliott, Senior Lecturer, Early Childhood Education - School of Education University of New England, Armidale, NSW, Australia
Examine scientists' view of the global Anthropocene, humankind's planet-scale impacts, and how intergenerational equity poses a critical need to integrate education for sustainability (EfS) across subject areas. Dr. Elliott will discuss how critical theory, post humanism, and systems theory frames education for sustainability principles and present EfS examples to be contemplated for both research and practice.

4 pm, Book Raffle (Need to be present to win)

4-5 pm, Time for Networking and Socializing

Please join us for this event even if you are only able to attend for part of the time. The professional development and research presentations are open to all CECH faculty, graduate students, and staff. Light snacks and beverages will be provided.
