The scope of this defense shall include an integration of the dissertation with other prior work on the topic, the applicability of the findings to current professional practices, and suggestions for further research. The oral defense shall be judged as a whole by each member of the dissertation committee as being either satisfactory or unsatisfactory. This committee must judge it to be satisfactory (with no more than one dissenting or abstaining vote) for the candidate to have “passed” the oral defense. When the candidate has successfully defended the dissertation, it is recommended that a public lecture thereon be scheduled.
