

Master of Arts

Educational Studies

Being an administrator in the education field will allow you to make effective change and implement strategies that will improve the educational experience for students and educators. Earning a Masters of Arts in Educational Studies will position you to emerge as a school leader and collaborate with fellow school administrators and teaching experts to create a quality learning experience.

Be EXPERIENCED

The Master of Arts in Educational Studies is a multi-disciplinary graduate degree program designed to provide students with greater understanding of the foundations of education, learning, development, and research in education and social change. Students may tailor program content to their areas of interest and professional goals by choosing between four tracks:

- Applied Research Methods
- Educational Psychology and Child Study
- Foundations of Education and Social Change
- Higher Education Administration

Participants in the Educational Studies graduate degree program may be teachers, administrators, community-based professionals working with children and families, or individuals working in institutions of higher learning.

“ We gain the knowledge, skills, confidence and connections necessary to tackle our most challenging community and global issues. ” – Gibin Raju, Educational Studies '19

Be INVESTED

Invest in yourself and your career. Before you graduate, you will build a resume that sets you apart, make connections that can help lead to job offers, learn what you like most about your field, and gain the confidence that only experience provides. Work in a variety of occupations, including:

- Director of Non-profit
- Elementary and Secondary School Administrator
- Higher Education Administrator
