

Master of Public Health

Health Education/ Health Promotion

The Master of Public Health, with a concentration in Health Education/Health Promotion, is a two-year program that educates its students through evidence-based approaches and experience in policy and research opportunities. Our program prepares students to analyze policy options and write clear policy statements, create methods for preventing and controlling environmental hazards that pose risks to human health and safety, and contribute to individuals and community health outcomes, to name a few!

Be EXPERIENCED

Our graduates will attain the knowledge and skills required for the public health field and related careers. Our students will take classes led by internationally known faculty who are public health professionals that work for some of the following agencies:

- Cincinnati Children's Hospital Medical Center
- Environmental Protection Agency (EPA)
- National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health (NIOSH)
- The regional and local health department
- UC Health network

Our faculty will teach public health principles through a classroom curriculum cultivated through research findings of faculty researchers and practitioners. In addition, our students will complete 120 supervised hours working in a public health or healthcare agency to gain applied practice.

Be INVESTED

Invest in yourself and your career. Before you graduate, you will build a resume that sets you apart, make connections that can help lead to job offers, learn what you like most about your field, and gain the confidence that only experience provides. Work in a variety of occupations, including:

- Clinical Liaison
- Community Health Worker
- Health and Wellness Coach
- Health Educator
- Patient Advocate
- Public Health Advisor/Specialist

$55k average earnings
for graduate students

10.32% Increase in demand in employment for this field over the next ten years (US Bureau of Labor Statistics, 2021)

“ The most beneficial part of the Public Health and Health Promotion/ Education program is being empowered as a health education to have the opportunity to improve the health of others by enacting positive change in communities. ”

– Megan Pearson, '21

Be YOU

Choose a concentration that works for you! The students in our MPH program can choose a concentration in one of the following subjects that allows you to narrow your focus in the sector of your career:

- Biostatistics
- Environmental Public Health
- Epidemiology
- Global Health
- Health Education/Health Promotion
- Health Services Management
- Occupational Public Health

Ready to Begin?

For more information about this program or to schedule a visit, please contact a representative:

Email: cechrecruit@uc.edu

Phone: (513) 556-6308

Visit us online: cech.uc.edu/hs

