

Doctor of Philosophy

Health Education

Educating individuals, families, and communities on making responsible health choices is how you have determined to serve your community best. Working in community health settings, health departments, nonprofit agencies, wellness centers, hospitals, corporate wellness programs, and health organizations is ideal for developing your research and future leaders.

$78,000 average earnings
for graduate students

7.22% Increase in demand
in employment for this field over the next 10 years (US Bureau of Labor Statistics, 2020)

Be EXPERIENCED

The doctoral degree in Health Education is grounded in current research and evidence-based health promotion and education practices to become certified health educators. Graduates in this program will gain further experience by completing their dissertation, comprehensive exams, and verbal exams.

“ The most beneficial part of Health Education is that we as health educators have the opportunity to improve the health of others by enacting positive change in communities. ”

– Megan Pearson, '20

Be INVESTED

Invest in yourself and your career. Before you graduate, you will build a resume that sets you apart, make connections that can help lead to job offers, learn what you like most about your field, and gain the confidence that only experience provides. Work in a variety of occupations, including:

- College Professor
- Community Health Worker
- Health Educator
- Human Services Manager
- Medical Director
- Social Science Researcher

During this three-year program, our graduates develop expertise in health areas such as substance abuse prevention, violence and suicide prevention, minority health, mental health promotion, women's health issues, nutrition, physical activity, sexual health, health program planning, implementation, and evaluation, and various other health issues.

Ready to Begin?

For more information about this program or to schedule a visit, please contact a representative:

Email: cechrecruit@uc.edu

Phone: (513) 556-6308

Visit us online: cech.uc.edu